Husband charged with murder

INVESTIGATION

Body found seven months after woman's disappearance

Lucie Edwardson
Metro | Calgary

Police have recovered the body of Shannon Burgess (née Madill), who had been missing for seven months, and have charged her former husband with her murder.

Joshua Burgess, 29, faces one count of second-degree murder, police announced Sunday.

Staff Sgt. Colin Chisholm of the CPS Homicide Unit said that the investigation shifted from a missing person investigation to a homicide investigation within the last week.

"Part of the information that we gathered over the last week or so led to the discovery of Shannon's body," Chisholm told reporters Sunday morning.

"An ongoing search warrant continues to be executed at the Madill-Burgess residence, where Shannon's body has been recovered."

Shannon had been last seen in the early morning hours of Nov. 27, 2014, at her home in the 1900 block of Spiller Road SE.

Chisholm said an initial "curiosity search" was done voluntarily at the residence where Shannon's body was found. He said the body had been concealed for the last several months and it wasn't until this week that they were able to obtain enough information to recover it.

An autopsy is scheduled for Monday.

Erin Madill, Shannon's sister, said news of her death was "devastating" to the family, who had been holding out hope she'd be found alive.

The family knew from police that Joshua had been a person of interest in the case but "we chose not to condemn or assume that he did it until we actually had facts in front of us," Erin said Sunday morning.

Joshua had spoken with the family "a little bit" in March but not since then, she added.

"I'm relieved that we have some closure and some answers but of course it is absolutely devastating, because so many lives have been ruined through this — his included and his family's," Erin said. "It's not just my family that is going to be hurt by this."

Joshua's next court appearance is scheduled for Monday.

Resident puts up $10K to find solution to noise

COMMUNITY

Officials say the city is willing to work with retiree

Morgan Modjeski
Metro | Calgary

Some people just complain to 311, but Keith Broadbent backs up his service requests with cold, hard cash.

A stone's throw away from his backyard deck, Broadbent said noise from a nearby basketball court has been putting a damper on his retirement relaxation and now he wants to work with the City of Calgary toward a solution.

However, rather than just pointing out the problem via 311, he informed the city he's willing to offer up $10,000 of his own money to improve the court.

"It's just the one thing that bothers me," he said.

"There's always noise out there. There's a playground and all that kind of stuff, but what happens ... is people go out there and it's like a constant, 'thump, thump, thump.'"

Broadbent said there are usually multiple people using the facility. With several basketballs bouncing on the cement court

Keith Broadbent, a resident in Calgary's Douglas Glen neighbourhood, is offering up $10,000 and is willing to work with the City of Calgary to find a solution to what he says is a noisy basketball court nearby. MORGAN MODJESKI/METRO at one time, he said the noise has become problematic.

"If I want to sit on my deck in the late afternoon or the evening, I just get a lot of this 'thump, thump, thump' and it gets you down over time," he said, noting he's tried ear phones in an attempt to stop the noise, but to no avail.

"I think it would cost me at least $10,000 to move and

I think it would cost me at least $10,000 to move and I don't really want to move.

Keith Broadbent, resident

I don't really want to move," he said. "I'm a retired guy and my house is just right for me. It backs onto the park and I have a nice garden that I work on a lot."

"I'd just like it to be a little less noisy," said the 76-year-old resident.

In a complaint filed to the city through 311, Broadbent said he would be willing to put up the $10,000 to have the court relocated or to have some sort of noise buffering technology installed to curb the racket.

John Merriman, a parks community strategist with the city, said all 311 complaints are reviewed by city officials and, in this instance, they're willing to work with Broadbent toward a solution.

"We'd be more than happy to have a chat with him and discuss his concerns and his ideas," Merriman said.

The city has an official consultation process that it has to first follow to gain insight into how the community would feel about possible changes, Merriman added.

"Now that we know that there is a potential issue, a concern from at least one resident and possibly more residents," he said.

"I'll be speaking with him, then connecting with the community association and starting to involve residents nearby."

Merriman described Broadbent's five-figure offer as "impressive," but noted until further conversations have occurred, it's hard to say if the city will be able to use the money.

"It's definitely a clear signal that he's passionate about finding a solution to what he feels is the noise issue."

Merriman said he planned to reach out to Broadbent in the coming days to speak with him further about the issue.

CHUCKWAGON RACES

Horse dies at Stampede

A 10-year-old thoroughbred horse died following an incident during the sixth heat of the Calgary Stampede chuckwagon races on Saturday night.

The horse belonged to the team of Layne Bremner. It suffered a broken hind leg. A vet attended the scene and determined the animal had a fractured cannon bone in its right leg after it made contact with another wagon.

"This is considered a serious injury, and unfortunately our veterinarian needed to euthanize the horse immediately," said Kurt Kadatz, spokesman for Calgary Stampede. The horse, Duke, had been inspected earlier in the week and prior to the race, according to the Stampede, which stated it will now undertake a review of the incident to determine if anything could have been done to prevent it.

"Unfortunately, broken legs are one of the most common types of injuries for thoroughbreds in the racing industry, including chuckwagon racing," said Kadatz. Bremner received a $2,500 no-time penalty along with a five second penalty for interference. The Vancouver Humane Society, a longtime objector to the Stampede rodeo, said in a statement Sunday Duke's death is further reason to suspend the chuckwagon races.

"Horses keep dying in this event and the Stampede is running out of excuses," VHS spokesman Peter Fricker said in the release.

Officer was off the beat when rifle went missing

POLICE

Discipline or injury are just two causes for desk duty

Morgan Modjeski
Metro | Calgary

The Calgary police officer who had a police-issue rifle stolen from his civilian vehicle was on administrative duty at the time of the incident, Metro has learned.

Const. Stephen Baker, usually a patrol officer in Calgary's District 3, was working on modified assignment when his cased patrol rifle, ammunition and five police notebooks were stolen out of his car while it was in the parking lot of the Crowfoot Schanks Sports Grill on April 4.

Police Chief Paul Cook would not confirm or deny that Const. Baker was on administrative duty for disciplinary reasons, due to it being a personnel matter. But he did say in a recent interview that the officer would have had access to the rifle whether he was on the beat or not.

"It's the same type of police officer," said Cook. "Same level of training at a counter is what you would see out on patrol."

"That same duty — or that

A Calgary police-issue C8 rifle like this one was stolen from Const. Stephen Baker's personal vehicle in April. Metro has learned Baker was on administrative duty at the time. METRO FILE same requirement — would require the same level of use of force equipment, potentially," he added, noting the C8 rifle, which has since been recovered, is a personal-issue weapon not unlike an officer's handgun.

Tom Engel, a criminal defence lawyer and chair of the Alberta Criminal Trial Lawyers' Association policing committee, said there are a limited number of reasons why an officer would be reassigned to desk duty.

Engel said it's his understanding that an officer can be on administrative duty due to physical ailments or illness, or because of a disciplinary reason.

Engel would have concerns if the officer had access to the rifle while on the desk.

"If he was on administrative duties because of some disciplinary issue, well, it is troubling that he would have access to any kind of firearm, let alone a C8," he said.

"If he was on administrative duties because he broke his ankle, well, that's different."

However, the president of the Calgary Police Association,

Howard Burns, said there are numerous reasons beyond physical ailment or disciplinary issues as to why an officer might end up on administrative duty.

Burns explained an officer might be assigned to administrative duty in order to get caught up on paperwork, personal accommodations or simply due to staffing issues.

The Calgary Police Service recently confirmed it believes Const. Baker's car was unlocked at the time of the theft and investigators said they're not optimistic the notebooks will be recovered, despite communicating with members of Calgary's criminal element in an attempt to retrieve them.

Police Chief Paul Cook said the investigation into the stolen items is a being done with a "tremendous amount of diligence." METRO FILE

When asked about the vehicle being targeted, Cook said Calgary police are not ruling anything out.

"At this point in time, I cannot speak to that specifically, but everything would be open for consideration in relation to that overall investigation," he said.

"We embark on these internal investigations with a tremendous amount of diligence, because we know there's a high public expectation and accountability behind it."

Cook also said those working on administrative duties are just as important to the service as officers on the front line.

"I can tell you that the men and women that work within our front counters have my utmost respect," he said.

"They have a challenging job; they continually deliver exceptional service at our counters everyday."

"Those positions are no more, or no less important than any position that we have within our service."

OKOTOKS

Cliff-jumping warning issued

EMS officials say a man was taken to hospital after he fell or jumped from a five-metre cliff in the Natures Hideaway Family Campground in Okotoks on Saturday.

According to Naomi Nania, a spokeswoman with Calgary EMS, Okotoks paramedics were dispatched to the area following a call about a man in distress in the water around 8:50 a.m.

The man, who was in his 20s, sustained a lower body injury and was taken to the Foothills Medical Centre in stable condition.

Nania said it's important for residents to take extra care when cliff jumping or cliff diving as the search for a thrill can lead to serious injury, noting that perceived water depth can be deceiving.

"That's when you actually have severe spinal cord injuries that can lead to paralysis and we never, ever want to see that," she said.

"So take caution, have fun out there, but don't do things that are too risky and could endanger your life."

Calgary EMS also noted that although the Shock Trauma Air Rescue Society (STARS) air ambulance was dispatched, the call was cancelled.

The man was transported to hospital by ground ambulance instead.

Swimmers are reminded to check — and recheck — the depth of the water beneath natural diving locations as lake and river bottoms are constantly changing.

Drive-in movie series pulls into Calgary for the summer

Just off Barlow Trail, the Stampede Drive-in first opened in July 1968. But after closing in 1979, the land was sold to commercial and industrial buyers, leaving no trace of the Stampede Drive-in. Now, drive-in movies are back — on a temporary basis — at Deerfoot Mall.

DEERFOOT MALL

City's last one closed in 1999

Jennifer Friesen
For Metro | Calgary

From childhood memories of watching Grace Kelly through your windshield, to a classic scene with a broken hearted Danny Zuko in Grease, drive-in theatres have been a long-standing relic in North America.

After Calgary's last drive-in theatre closed in 1999, it seemed the phenomenon would become a thing of the past. But for five nights this summer, the new Destination: Deerfoot City will be converting Deerfoot Mall's parking lot into a drive-in.

"There are a lot of people who feel nostalgic for drive-ins, or who wished they could have experienced drive-ins themselves," said Jasmin MacDonald with Destination: Deerfoot City. "It's something that's been in movies and TV shows for generations, so people feel nostalgic for it, even if they've never experienced it before."

MacDonald said that she's noticed a "resurgence" of people longing for the drive-in experience, adding that their last season was their biggest yet.

According to Statistics Canada's latest drive-in survey in 2004/2005, attendance at drive-in theatres jumped 20.4 per cent, with five new theatres popping up. But despite the surge, profits still fell 14.2 per cent.

Charles Tepperman, professor of film studies at the University of Calgary, said "what we're seeing now is echoes of the drive-in."

From a commercial standpoint, he said he doesn't think drive-ins can compete with the latest blockbusters and their extras like 3D and D-BOX.

"There was a time when it used to be really a part of the movie business, but it isn't anymore," he said.

"The economy of film exhibition is sort of at odds with drive-in theatres, so that's why they pop up from time to time at these niche or nostalgia events as a way to get people to come out occasionally — but not in a sustainable way."

Despite concerns about the business value of drive-ins themselves, MacDonald said drive-ins bring more of a "festival atmosphere" and she doesn't expect them to disappear any time soon.

"At a movie theatre, you just focus on the screen and the quiet, there's no communication other than laughing when everyone else laughs," she said. "A drive-in is more a way to connect with people."

Orchestra of canines will perform at Beakerhead

Lucie Edwardson
Metro | Calgary

If you are into the wild, wacky world of science and technology, Beakerhead has an idea that just might be barking up your tree.

For the third annual science, art and technology spectacular, organizers will be putting together a “dog orchestra” made up of Calgary’s own furry friends.

“Last year we tried it and people really enjoyed it, so this year will be the souped-up improved version,” said Claudia Bustos, community engagement manager for Beakerhead.

The orchestra works using a technology called a Makey Makey board — a product designed by the Lifelong Kindergarten Group at MIT — that allows you to turn anything conductive into a switch.

“When you pet the dog it will let you complete a switch that will trigger a note,” said Dana Scholls, a Beakerhead collaborator who is designing conductive dog booties the dogs will wear, enabling them to make the music.

Using the booties, and alligator clips attached to the Makey Makey board, each dog’s technology will be programmed to make different instrument noises and song bits, composed by another Beakerhead collaborator.

As Beakerhead gears up the five-day September event, organizers will be holding dog orchestra auditions on Aug. 15 from 10 a.m. to noon.

“We are looking for dogs who are friendly, who fit well together and who can handle being petted for up to 45 minutes,” said Bustos.

Beakerhead is also looking for a “dog conductor,” which Bustos said is a fancy way of saying dog handler, and they ask anyone who thinks they might fit that position to contact them.

The dogs will be performing three of the five days at Beakerhead, Sept. 16 to 18, 4 to 6 p.m. on Stephen Avenue.

Alberta ready for Saskatchewan evacuees

The Alberta government is preparing to receive up to 5,000 people from La Ronge, Sask., as forest fires continue to force evacuations.

The military’s help was already anticipated from the Canadian Forces base in Cold Lake when the Saskatchewan government announced Saturday that evacuees from La Ronge would head to centres in the neighbouring province.

Local officials made the call to evacuate La Ronge, as well as the neighbouring community of Air Ronge and the Lac La Ronge Indian Band, when the flames crossed a safety threshold, said Duane McKay, Saskatchewan’s commissioner of emergency management.

On Sunday, McKay said the fire burned on the edge of the airport about five kilometres north of the town.

of folks that are still up there supporting the ongoing operations,” McKay said.

Karri Kempf with Saskatchewan’s social services ministry said the decision to send the La Ronge evacuees to Alberta was made to ensure there would still be some room left in the Saskatchewan centres where earlier evacuees from other fires are being housed.

Provincial officials say the amount of land that’s burning in Saskatchewan this year is almost 10 times what’s normal.

Premier Brad Wall said Saturday that he’d spoken on the phone earlier in the day with Prime Minister Stephen Harper about the possible need for military help, and that Harper had been “accommodating” to such a request when it was officially made.

STAMPEDING COMEBACKTwo years after a severe spinal injury, Aaron Roy returns

After an arduous and incredible comeback, highly ranked Canadian bull rider Aaron Roy is competing at the Calgary Stampede for the first time since he broke his back two years ago during a ride at the Greatest Outdoor Show on Earth in 2013.

The crowd was stunned when Roy was bucked off a bull named Gretzky just after leaving the gate, but the worst of the injury came when the large animal then stepped on him and broke his back.

The injury required surgery to be repaired, with two rods and eight screws inserted to hold Roy's spine together.

"It was a long recovery process and I wasn't sure I'd ever make it back to the Stampede," Roy said.

But he persevered through two years of difficult rehabilitation and started riding again in February before making his Stampede return on Friday with a second-place finish that day, putting behind any doubts of returning to the sport he dearly loves.

"It was nerve-wracking before the bull riding started but, once it started, it's bull riding that has to be on your mind; you can't think about anything else," Roy said. "It felt really good to get on that bull and get that first one out of the way and now I can go get 'em for the rest of the week."

The Saskatchewan cowboy hails from a family of professional bull riders and, now that he has his first few rides out of the way, Roy says it's just great to be back riding again.

"It was hard at the start but now I've been on quite a few bulls so I don't think about it any more," he said. "There is always danger in bull riding and it could happen to anybody but that's the name of the sport. That's why we do it, for the thrill."

Aaron Roy from Yellow Grass, Sask., competes in the Bull Riding event on Day 3 of the Calgary Stampede Rodeo on Sunday.

VARIETY

Pop, country, emerging bands among those pleasing ears

Krista Sylvester
For Metro

It may sound cliché but there really is something for everyone when it comes to music at the Calgary Stampede.

Pop music? Check. Country music? Of course. Up and coming artists? Got it. Seasoned bands? Got that, too. Local talent? Lots of it.

With everything from emerging talented artists including Calgary's own pop queen Kiesza and the unique-sounding July Talk to the popular 90s band Moist and country talents including Alberta's Brett Kissel, this year's Stampede has it all – and that's not even including the headliners at the Scotiabank Saddledome.

"We believe in promoting local talent but also in providing great music and this year's unprecedented music experience for Stampede goers is no exception," Stampede production manager Lindsay Weryshko said.

"We are excited to have the opportunity to showcase the hottest artists across all genres on the Coca-Cola Stage with a variety of musical tastes in mind."

Nashville North is also a hotbed for rising stars and this year features a mesh between award-winning Canadian music artists and well-known American artists, Weryshko said.

"Nashville North features today's hottest country music artists and music for 10 hours a day to keep our guests entertained. Nashville North is the hottest spot in town during the Stampede as it becomes a music destination."

Nashville North will wrap things up in a hot new way with the Nashville North All-Star Band on Sunday, July 12, with a lineup led by Jason Greeley and a host of special guests.

"We are very excited about this because it is the first time we have multiple artists perform together on the same night," Weryshko said.

Half a century of Indian Princesses

Krista Sylvester
For Metro | Calgary

It's a tradition spanning decades.

This year marks the 50th anniversary of the Indian Princess program and the Calgary Stampede and Indian Village are going back to their roots, with alumni from as early as 1965 making special appearances.

The Indian Village Princess Program has served as a way to educate and encourage dedication to the preservation of the Treaty 7 traditions, according to Terri Jo Lennox, chairwoman of the Indian Princess subcommittee.

"It is pretty exciting and thrilling for the alumni to be a part of Stampede legacy and it's also really fascinating to see the Princesses spanning back from its humble beginnings in 1965 with Gloria Littlelight all the way to the princess from 2014, Carly Weasel Child, and many in between," she said.

"It's beautiful to see their traditional regalia and each one has her own story to tell."

The Calgary Stampede Indian Princess represents the tribes of Treaty 7 (Siksika, Tsuu T'ina, Stoney, Piikani and Kainai nations), Indian Village and the Stampede.

There are still a few chances for guests to meet the Indian Princess Alumni at the Indian Village: July 6 from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.; July 8 from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.; and July 12 at 6 p.m. for the closing ceremony of the village before it moves to its new location in Enmax Park for next year.

Stampede fashion: Don't overthink it

CLOTHING

Merchants have boots, hats, jeans and accessories

Krista Sylvester
For Metro | Calgary

If you're overly worried about what you're going to wear to the Stampede this year, then you might be overthinking it.

It's really quite simple, according to Calgary Stampede spokeswoman Jennifer Booth, who says the key ingredients to a good Western outfit are boots, a belt buckle and a hat.

"Every good traditional Western outfit will be complete with a good pair of comfortable cowboy boots, the perfect hat and you've gotta have a belt buckle, usually the bigger the better," she said.

"But from there, you're really able to give your outfit your own flair with your shirt and jeans, and for the girls, they can accessorize and also wear dresses. You can really do any Western flavour you want, with bling or the modern cowboy look. It's a lot of fun to put your style into it."

Women tend to be able to have a little more freedom in the fashion department, and adding a colour such as turquoise, or jewelry, or a nice plaid shirt that is embroidered, is always an option.

If you haven't bought an outfit yet or still need that finishing touch, don't fret — there are nine locations at the grounds where you can cowboy up.

"We can really outfit the whole setup at the park," Booth said. "We have a lot of selection for cowboy boots, Wrangler jeans, Western shirts, jewelry and hats with various price points from low to high."

When it comes to belt buckles, the bigger the better.

Guests will see a variety of new product offerings this year at the Stampede Park stores as local retailer Lammle's Western Wear & Tack have taken over the merchandising operations since March, with a lot of new products as a result, and a push toward more accessible fashion.

Observers concerned with fixed-date election

POLITICS

Change creates loophole for spending that may be abused

The first fixed-date election in Canadian history is just around the corner, but some observers are raising concerns about over-spending because of a law they say is flawed.

When the Conservatives introduced a fixed election date nine years ago, political financing rules were not adjusted accordingly, says Elections Canada boss Marc Mayrand.

"We must not be blind," said Mayrand. "As much as it is easier for Elections Canada to plan for the election, it's just as easy for political parties and third parties" to plan their spending before the election.

Those expenses generally go "beyond the rules outlined in the electoral law," he added.

The Harper government had a chance to close some of those loopholes when it examined the electoral law but opted to leave a "gaping hole," says Thierry Giasson, a political science professor at Université Laval.

"The issue of pre-election spending was raised but the government consciously decided not to dwell on it," said Giasson.

Election campaigns are organized 12 to 18 months in advance, but only expenses incurred during the official campaign period are capped, Giasson said.

A fixed-date election extends that period considerably — meaning weeks and months of unofficial campaigning not subject to rules, opposition MPs say.

"Pre-election spending is subject to quite significant abuse, with taxpayers' money that is used for government announcements," said Liberal MP Dominic LeBlanc.

The NDP's Peter Julian said using public funds to "constantly finance a sort of partisan campaign in favour of the Conservative party" is a Harper government "trademark."

The Conservatives were criticized in the spring for trumpeting tax measures not yet approved by Parliament: the Universal Child Care Benefit.

Cheques are going out to four million families in the days to come and have been the subject of recent Conservative photo-ops featuring cabinet ministers Pierre Poilievre and Steven Blaney.

Conservative MP Maxime Bernier dismissed the notion that events like those are part of a strategy to seduce voters.

"People are smart," Bernier said. "I think the public knows the difference between pre-election ads to ... try to buy votes and ads that are part of a broader government plan."

Political parties aside, the emergence of third-party groups like Engage Canada and Harper PAC on the political landscape has some observers speculating

When Conservatives introduced a fixed election date in 2006, financing rules were not adjusted, says Elections Canada boss Marc Mayrand (pictured). JUSTIN TANG/THE CANADIAN PRESS about an Americanization of the Canadian electoral system.

Others believe Canada is still a long way from that reality.

"Is the political culture changing, and how much of that is actually due to the fixed date?" Mayrand wondered. "That's a little hard to say, but I would say we are still far from the U.S. system."

The Oct. 19 vote will mark the first time a fixed election will have taken place. While it was designed to create a level playing field, Giasson said it's clear the party in power still has the upper hand.

Mayrand said he'll make recommendations to Parliament following the general election and will likely tackle the spending issue.

CENSUS

StatsCan asks the question

Call it the Mike Duffy question.

When Canadians receive their census questionnaire next year, they'll be asked to fill out the address of their "secondary residence," if they happen to have one and are at that location on census day.

"A secondary residence" could be, "for example, a cottage," the form reads.

It's the same question Statistics Canada asks every five years: Tell us where you live and whether it is your usual place of residence.

This means the agency has a better idea of what constitutes a secondary residence than the Senate — a question central to the controversy over housing expenses and the upper chamber.

The census question is meant to ensure respondents aren't counted more than once. Such a mistake, multiplied millions of times over, could throw off population counts that governments and private businesses use when designing programs or planning projects.

Big 'No' to more austerity

GREEK REFERENDUM

Nation's future in eurozone uncertain

Greece lurched into uncharted territory and an uncertain future in Europe's common currency Sunday after voters overwhelmingly rejected demands by international creditors for more austerity measures in exchange for a bailout of its bankrupt economy.

Results showed roughly 61 per cent voted 'No,' compared with 39 per cent for 'Yes.' The referendum — Greece's first in more than four decades — came amid severe restrictions on financial transactions in the country, imposed last week to stem a bank run that accelerated after the vote was called.

Thousands of jubilant government supporters celebrated in Syntagma Square in front of Parliament, waving Greek flags and chanting "No, no, no!"

Early trading on Asian markets indicated investors were alarmed, as stock indexes fell.

It was a decisive victory for Prime Minister Alexis Tsipras,

Supporters of the No vote celebrate after the results of the referendum at Syntagma square in Athens, Sunday. EMILIO MORENATTI/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS who had gambled the future of his five-month-old coalition government — and his country — in an all-or-nothing game of brinkmanship with Greece's creditors from other eurozone countries, the International Monetary Fund and the European Central Bank.

"Today we celebrate the victory of democracy," Tsipras said in a televised address to the nation, describing Sunday as "a bright day in the history of Europe."

"We proved even in the most difficult circumstances that democracy won't be blackmailed," he said.

Tsipras called the referendum last weekend, saying a 'No' vote would strengthen his hand to negotiate a better deal for his country. His government has said it believes it would be possible to conclude a deal with creditors within 48 hours.

But European officials and most of Greece's opposition parties painted the referendum as one of whether the country kept using the euro — even though that was not the convoluted question asked on the ballot. Opinion polls Friday showed that 74 per cent or more want their country to remain in the euro.

"Given the unfavourable conditions last week, you have made a very brave choice," Tsipras told Greeks in his address. "But I am aware that the mandate you gave me is not a mandate for rupture." He said he would seek to negotiate a viable solution with the country's creditors.

How European officials react to the referendum result will be critical for the country, and a eurozone summit was called for Tuesday evening to discuss the situation.

German Chancellor Angela Merkel and French President Francois Hollande agreed "that the vote of the Greek people must be respected," Merkel's office said.

The referendum result was "very regrettable for the future of Greece," said Jeroen Dijsselbloem, head of the eurozone finance ministers' meeting known as the Eurogroup, which also will meet Tuesday.

ROYAL FAMILY

Milestone for U.K.'s princess

Prince William and his wife, Kate, marked a milestone for their newborn baby Princess Charlotte on Sunday — a christening ceremony on Queen Elizabeth II's country estate that was steeped in royal tradition.

Hundreds of fans outside St. Mary Magdalene Church in Sandringham, a sprawling royal estate near England's eastern coast, cheered as William and Kate arrived with toddler Prince George and nine-week-old Charlotte, who was in a vintage pram.

It was only the second time the princess, who is fourth in line to the throne, has been seen in public since she was born on May 2. Charlotte was dressed in a replica of the intricate lace-and-satin christening gown made for Queen Victoria's eldest daughter in 1841. Until 2008, that original gown had been worn by all royal babies — including the Queen — at their christenings.

Following tradition, holy water from the River Jordan, where it's said Jesus was baptized by John the Baptist, was used for the baptism. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

U.S. trading pits to go silent

STOCK MARKET

New systems force closure of futures floors in Chicago, N.Y.C.

Pete Meegan had every intention of going back to college, but then he got a summer job in the Chicago trading pits and fell in love with the "roar" of the floor, the excitement of "4,000 people yelling, 'Buy! Buy! Buy!'" and decided there would be no more classrooms for him.

That roar will soon go silent. On Monday, most futures pits in Chicago and New York City, where frenzied buying and selling once helped set prices on cattle and corn, gold and dozens of other commodities, are expected to close for good. Traders yelled and shoved and flashed hand signals, just as they did in the movie Trading Places. But now the computer — faster, cheaper and not nearly as noisy — has taken over.

It will be a sad day for Meegan, still in the pits 34 years after dropping out of college, donning a trading jacket and mustering the courage to tell his dad.

"I thought he was gonna kill me, but he was like, 'I don't care if you pick up garbage or you're a dog groomer. If you are happy doing what you are doing, you're ahead of 99 per cent of the people in the world,'" recalls Meegan, now 54.

Dan Grant, 53, traces his love affair with the pits to a $150-a-week job as a "runner" ferrying messages between clerks taking phone orders from customers and brokers executing them.

Six years into his career, on Oct. 19, 1987, stocks were plunging around the world and he was a clerk taking orders from the head traders at Chemical Bank and Drexel Burnham Lambert desperate to buy anything to protect themselves. Grant still marvels that at just 24, with no college degree, he wielded such power in the crash, later known as Black Monday.

"They were buying Treasuries and currencies, and watching their stock portfolios go to zero," he recalls. "It was a lot of fun."

Not all futures pits are going away. In its February announcement about the closings, the owner of the exchanges said the pits where Standard and Poor's 500 stock futures and options on futures are traded will remain open.

Floor trading of stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, which is owned by a different company, won't end, either.

Grant, the runner turned clerk who now oversees his own trading firm, says he mourns the loss of the kind of entry-level positions that gave kids without much education a chance to prove themselves, just as he did.

Cheque-printing company keeps pace in an ever-changing world

Ten years ago, Toronto-based DH Corp. made virtually all of its money by printing cheques.

But over the past decade, the company once known as Davis + Henderson Corp (DH), has transformed itself into a technology business serving financial institutions, with cheques comprising only 20 per cent of its revenue.

"It's long been predicted that cheque usage will decline," Duncan Hannay, president of the company's Canadian division, said in an interview.

"I think that was the thing that really prompted the company to look at its future and assess how it could better position itself with its banking clients — both in Canada and potentially globally, to diversify its revenue."

With the emergence of new digital forms of payment such as email money transfers, use of paper cheques has been steadily on the decline, shrinking by roughly five per cent a year, according to the Canadian Bankers Association.

While personal cheques have been losing their popularity by high single-digit percentages annually, business cheques have fared somewhat better.

"Canadian business still depends on cheques to a great extent," Hannay said. "It's highly integrated into their workflows."

The declining popularity of cheques has caused DH to shift gears, expanding into new lines of business such as digital payments and providing technologies that banks use to make loans. In fact, the company's lending segment makes up more than 40 per cent of its revenue.

Hannay says there is some opportunity for DH to grow its cheque business. Although the dominant player in Canada's personal cheques market.

"Given that we only have a 50 per cent share of the business cheque, and that's our most profitable cheque segment, there is an opportunity for us to grow," he said, predicting paper cheques will be around for the next decade or so. "Beyond that, inevitably, electronic forms of payment will dominate." THE CANADIAN PRESS

IN BRIEF

Chinese factory collapses

A shoe factory collapsed in eastern China during a weekend shift, killing at least nine people and injuring more than 30, officials said Sunday. Nine people escaped the collapse Saturday afternoon in the Zhejiang province city of Wenling. Rescuers pulled 42 people from the rubble and sent them to a hospital where nine of them died, the Wenling city government said on its microblog. The accident is under investigation. THE BIG POLL: Uber-contentious

It's dominating headlines, street protests and taxicab conversations across the nation: Everyone seems to have an opinion about ride-sharing apps like Uber and Lyft. For traditionalists, these apps are replacing taxi drivers' well-paid, secure jobs with unlicensed casual workers and little oversight. To others, it's a cheap and convenient way to get around — and a sign that the future smartphone-based retail economy is en route. We asked our online readers where they stand.

Visit metronews.ca every Friday morning to answer The Big Poll and have your say.

Love the economy? The arts? Love the Stampede

KINGKADE'S CALGARY

Roger Kingkade

It's Stampede time again, dear Metro reader. You know what that means.

Wait, what does it mean? Different things to different people, I guess.

I suppose I couldn't blame you if you think, at this moment, that you're about to read a column slagging the Calgary Exhibition and Stampede — The Greatest Outdoor Show on Earth.

Rest assured, you're not about the read a scathing, negative teardown of my favourite time of year. You're about to read a mild rebuke of those who do tear it down.

It's an annual complaint from a certain crowd: "The drunk cowboy festival is coming. Better get out of town." Words like "embarrassment" are sometimes tossed around.

And these aren't hushed voices or whispers. It's an almost boastful exercise for some. Would these same people ever deride Sled Island or the Calgary Underground Film Festival?

Is it ever fashionable to slam an organization with a host of dedicated volunteers, all hoping to enrich Calgary while showcasing it to those beyond the city limits?

Let's concede that, like any major tourist draw in any city, the Stampede comes with some frustrations. But the Stampede isn't some Beijing Olympic-type ego stroke for the political elite. It's a nonprofit organization that puts on a party that generates nearly a quarter of Alberta's tourism economy — about $345 million last year.

On a smaller scale, the Stampede's impact on individuals is spread far and wide. Think of the 3,500 people who will be employed on the Stampede grounds for the 10 days. These are great first jobs for teenagers looking to build skills. For those already working in the service industry, these 10 days may run you off your feet, but that bank account sure looks good!

The cultural impact of Stampede is immense as well.

Is there a bigger supporter of local and emerging artists than the Stampede? The Young Canadians, for starters, are a tuition-free youth performing arts troupe that gives Calgary kids a foot in the door to the performing arts world.

The world-renowned Stampede Showband gives young musicians a chance to travel as ambassadors for Calgary.

There are talent showcases and the Stampede proudly books homegrown acts for big stages.

Let's cut anti-Stampeders some slack. It's hard to capture the year-round impact of the Calgary Stampede from a table at one of Calgary's awesome year-round pubs. And the Stampede lets its legacy speak for itself in many ways despite their talented PR wing. You could say they're more cattle than hat.

It's hard to credibly support a vibrant arts and culture community while openly hating on the Stampede. If some people got their wish and the Stampede disappeared, Calgary artists and aspiring artists would not be better off for it.

Roger Kingkade co-hosts the Kingkade and Breakenridge show every weekday morning from 9 a.m. to noon on NewsTalk 770.

Some days, I don't believe victory over sexism is possible

Question: How many reports does it take to end sexism?

Answer: Infinite. Or: None.

Since the report on sexism at Dalhousie's dentistry program was released last week, observers have noted — just as they did after the report on sexism in the military came out earlier this year — that no campus or government department is an island. Our broader culture is, at root, to blame.

And it's true.

The Dalhousie report, which stemmed from the revelation of a very rapey Facebook page run by male students — found the school "permits incidents of sexism, misogyny, homophobia and racism."

Dalhousie, of course, isn't alone. Last week, a York University student filed a human-rights complaint against that school for its allegedly lackadaisical response when she told them she'd been raped by a fellow student.

"The (Facebook page) 'Class of DDS 2015 Gentlemen' did not exist in a vacuum," the Dalhousie report notes in its section on "Society," under the heading "Why did this happen?"

If that sounds like a cop-out by the report's authors, partly, it is. It's an admission of the obvious: that reports can't solve sexism, as much as they may attempt to do their part. They can't even force change unless they're turned into action (the Dalhousie recommendations don't even include new rules at the school: It already has sufficient ones in place).

In fact, they're most successful as litmus tests. We're at a point on the sexism scale, they indicate, where the ultimate, implicit goal is a world free from prejudice. We've made improvements, we then tell ourselves. Maybe, with these reports, we can make more.

And maybe, a lot won't change. The Dalhousie Facebook page, with its comments about using nitrous oxide on women and "hate f-king" them, carries the same message as was scrawled across Queen's University in 1989. At the time, as This Magazine reported, signs such as "No" means "Kick her in the teeth," "No" means "more beer" and "No" means "Down on your knees, b-tch" were posted in response to a "No" means "No" campaign against date rape.

Some days, and this is one of them, I don't believe victory over sexism is possible. I don't believe reports will do much to help. I don't feel like doing the womanly thing and being grateful for how far we've come, or hopeful for the future. I'm not even angry.

I drink my coffee, and do my job, and think that's just the society we will always live in.

PHILOSOPHER CAT
by Jason Logan

Karl's kitty caught up in fur pas

LUXURY FASHION

Ex sex kitten asks chic cat to purr-suade her owner to quit furring around

With fashionistas baking in a mascara-melting heat wave and Italy's Fendi set to raise hackles with an all-fur collection, Paris Fashion Week, which opened Sunday, may prove a tad too haute to handle.

High-fashion designers will unveil their autumn and winter collections over five days in Paris that will kick off with shows by Russian couturier Ulyana Sergeenko and Dutch designer Ilja Visser.

But the highlight of the extravaganza will be German fashion legend Karl Lagerfeld's collection celebrating his 50 years working for Fendi, hailed as the "longest relationship between a designer and a fashion house."

The show on Wednesday will be entirely "haute fourrure" or, couture fur — a material the luxury fashion brand has never shied away from.

French film icon and passionate animal activist Brigitte Bardot has already shown her disapproval by writing a letter to Choupette Lagerfeld, the designer's pampered feline companion.

Bardot appealed to the cat — who has become famous with 48,000 Twitter followers — to "purr in the ear" of her master and save her "furry friends."

But even Choupette, whose every whim is catered to, is unlikely to stop the show.

Lagerfeld has often said that while he is very sympathetic to the anti-fur cause, doing away with the industry would cause a lot of people to lose their jobs.

"For me, as long as people eat meat and wear leather, I don't get the message," he told the New York Times in a recent interview, adding however that he preferred not to think about how the animals died.

The indefatigable Lagerfeld, 81, will also be presenting his collection for Chanel, the fashion house that is perhaps the most synonymous with Paris's reputation for glamour and known for spectacular staging.

In total some 30 designers will present the Haute Couture shows seen only in the City of Light.

The designation is protected by French law and attributed exclusively by the ministry of industry to 14 houses whose high-end clothes are entirely made by hand and tailored to each client.

On Monday the glitterati will be glued to the show by Schiaparelli as French designer Bertrand Guyon makes his debut as style director for the legendary house.

Founded in 1930 by Elsa Schiaparelli, Coco Chanel's biggest rival, the house made its couture comeback in January 2014 after lying dormant for 60 years.

On Wednesday John Galiano will put on his second couture show for Margiela in Paris, after choosing to present his comeback collection in London in January — seen as a snub to the French capital where he fell from grace.

Galliano lost his job as Dior's star designer in 2011 when he was filmed in a Paris bar making slurred insults against Jews, and disappeared from the runway for several years.

This time it is Valentino who will be missing from the Paris couture diary, having chosen to show his collection on Thursday in Rome as he celebrates the opening of his largest store in the world. AFP

GROWTH OPPlant medical pot with free 3D printer system

An Ottawa tech company that allowed urbanites to plant veggies with 3D-printable gardening tools is planting another type of green.

3Dponics Inc. has created a printable hydroponics system for medical marijuana.

"We're merging 3D printing, horticulture, medical marijuana and so much more," said 3Dponics CEO Michael Golubev.

Like the company's initial balcony ecosystem, this printable hydroponics system is free. The pieces snap together, then pot growers will need to buy a water pump before they can grow their own weed. It works like any other drip hydroponics system. So far, there are beta users in the U.S., but all the files will be downloadable within the next two weeks.

There's green to be made in this growing business.

"It's like the gold rush, basically, especially in the States," Golubev said.

Nourish work connections

NETWORKING

Build on the momentum of those first introductions

OFFICE RELATIONS

Eleni Deacon

You click with a new contact at a professional event. You work in similar fields and seem to be on the same wavelength. Cards are exchanged. Later that week, you add each other on LinkedIn. Then you never speak again.

Sound familiar? Networking can be nerve-racking: not only do you have to figure out what to say to a stranger, you don't want to seem phoney or needy. But while that first introduction might appear daunting, it's a small hurdle compared to what's next. Because the trickiest aspect of networking isn't making new contacts — it's maintaining them.

To keep connections from

Keeping in touch with professional contacts will keep you on their radar. ISTOCK crumbling, practise consistency. Effective networking doesn't mean sending a surge of emails when you start looking for a job. It should be a steady habit throughout your career. Rather than thinking of contacts as names on a scorecard, think of them as genuine relationships that evolve over time. The first step to playing the networking long game: Stop thinking of it as a game.

Lasting affiliations require regular communication. In the weeks after you meet, send a targeted but casual email — then repeat the process periodically. Your notes could include links to cool articles, followup questions about their work, or anecdotes relevant to your previous conversations. The goal is not to immediately ask for a recommendation or favour — it's to develop a rapport. Reach out routinely, and they'll do the same when pertinent opportunities become available.

In-person catch-ups will also strengthen your ties. The time commitment doesn't have to be huge: a quick lunch or coffee every six months to a year will be enough to upgrade your connection from distant acquaintance to friendly associate. No time to make things personal? Social media, when used thoughtfully, can keep your network fresh. You won't become besties, but simply liking Facebook statuses or favouriting tweets will ensure you're on their radar when gigs arise.

Networking isn't just about getting perks — it's also about giving them. One of the most effective ways to encourage someone else to help you is to help them first. Introducing a new contact to others in your sphere, offering expertise, or providing a quality service will demonstrate that you're not solely invested in your own advancement — you're also investing in them. The payoff may not be immediate, but chances are they'll return the favour at some point in your career.

Many people "hate" networking, but that's because they hate what networking shouldn't be: a schmooze. Show sincere interest in the people you meet, and they'll keep your best interest in mind.

Recent Canadian figures show that the average student graduating with student debt is now $27,000 in the red when they finish school. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE FILE

The student loan question

DEBT

Here's when it pays off to pay it off ASAP

Kyle Prevost
youngandthrifty.ca

Some “money gurus” tell you the key to financial success is to pay off all your debts as soon as possible, while others preach that it’s compound interest and investing for the future that will set you free. It may be common sense to pay off high-interest debt like that found on your credit card balance, but things get a little bit grey when looking at student loan debt.

According to the Canadian Federation of Students, the average student that graduates with student debt is now $27,000 in the red when they don the iconic cap and gown. In a job market where young folks are having trouble launching their careers, that number can cause intense anxiety.

In order to better understand how this decision pertains to you, the first thing you need to know is that the generic term “student loan” actually refers to two separate loans — your provincial student loan and federal student loan (it can also apply to private student loans).

The reason this distinction is so important is that those two loans will get treated differently after you leave post-secondary education. Your province sets the interest rate for the provincial part of the loan and the Canadian government is responsible for the interest rate on the federal share.

For example, in my home province of Manitoba it was recently announced that there would no longer be any interest charged on provincial student loans, while the federal government still requires you to pay a rate of prime plus 2.5 per cent or prime plus 5 per cent if you want to lock in your current rate.

This difference in interest rates might not seem like a big deal, but it can take hundreds or even thousands of dollars out of your pocket.

While I would rather invest my money than pay off a “free” Manitoba student loan, the choice isn’t so clear when looking at the common current federal student loan rate of 5.35 per cent.

While that student loan interest will generate a tax credit, (basically generating a “real rate” of 4.55 per cent), you still can’t go wrong paying off that sort of debt. Private student loans accessed through your bank or credit union often have higher interest rates and have no accompanying tax credit, so they’re even more attractive options for early payment.

LOANS 101

- Government student loans consist of two parts — federal and provincial.
- Private student loans come from your bank or credit union. They often have higher interest rates and are not eligible for tax credits.
- Figuring out your “real” rate of interest means factoring in your provincial interest rate, federal interest rate, and relevant tax credits.
- Are you comfortable with investing? If the answer is no, then keep it simple and pay off the debt.

Ultimately, the purely mathematical side of the argument shows that if you understand how to invest your money and want to look at the long term, you are pretty likely to come out ahead if you were to invest any extra cash instead of paying down your student loan early. We don’t live in a mathematical vacuum though, and if the weight of your student loan is causing you to lose sleep at night, then pay off the portion of your loan with the highest interest rate and rest easy.

Baltimore Ravens football star also a mathlete

Raquel Laneri
Metro | New York City

John Urschel is best known as an offensive lineman for the Baltimore Ravens. But he's also a mathematics whiz who has published academic papers (his latest: A Cascadic Multigrid Algorithm for Computing the Fiedler Vector of Graph Laplacians), taught college calculus (at alma mater Penn State) and presented research to the NSA.

In addition to teaching during the off-season, Urschel is now partnering with new startup Persado, figuring out how to use math to generate compelling ad copy. (So, he can add Don Draper 2.0 to his résumé, too.)

We caught up with the mathlete and asked him why it's important for football players to know their times tables.

You are a football player

Baltimore Raven John Urschel #64 is a mathematics whiz. RONALD MARTINEZ/GETTY IMAGES and a mathematician. Most people can grasp the football player part, but what exactly does a mathematician do?

Being a mathematician, in essence, is just applying mathematics to the world we live in. And that's it ... It doesn't have to be in academia. It can be in government, working for the NSA; it can be in the private sector, such as with a company like Persado, which has mathematicians.

I always had this desire to understand the unknown, and math—man — it was this beautiful thing.

John Urschel

I believe that the 21st century is the century of the mathematician.

So, does math make you a better football player? Is there a connection between math and football?

Mainly the competitiveness. That strong competitive drive — “I’m going to beat you” — is the same when it comes to tackling a math problem — like, “I am going to solve this and get at this and be victorious.”

Beyond that, the better you are at thinking quickly and efficiently, the better of a football player you’re going to be.

You’re involved with lots of STEM and education initiatives. Why is it so important for kids to get into math?

No matter what job you get into — whether it’s writing, working at a PR firm or playing professional football — mathematics will serve you well.

You will face problems throughout your life — problems that the great majority of the time you have never faced before. And all of a sudden, you’ll need to take your experiences, the skills you have learned, and the tools you have acquired and somehow apply them to this new thing.

Your careers are so different and both are challenging — how do you balance them?

I have this terrible balance in my life. The problem is I love football and I do football, and I love math and I do math.

But then I don’t want to do anything else, and I don’t do anything else ... But I like my life, so I guess it’s not that bad!

Startups hope to disrupt the way we eat plants, animals

A wave of Silicon Valley-style disruption is hitting the food industry.

Lab-grown meat, vegan cheese and “animal free” milk and eggs are headed for consumers, often with backing from the tech sector and its financial allies.

These products could fill an important need while reducing environmental problems such as energy and land use for traditional food industries, according to backers.

This new group of startups is essentially hacking the food sector with new ideas and technologies involving food and with strong ties to Silicon Valley.

Some are using plant protein to substitute for animal products while others are producing foods biologically through so-called “cellular agriculture.”

At least $138 million in investment poured into the segment of “sustainable protein” startups in 2014, according to the research firm AgFunder. Another research firm, CB Insights, calculates at least $221 million invested in the sector over the past 18 months.

More deals appear to be cooking, with participation from major Silicon Valley players.

Bioengineering food

“I think this new industry will be disruptive,” said Isha Datar, executive director of the non-profit group New Harvest, which promotes cellular agriculture, or the use of stem or other cells to produce replications of animal products.

The tech sector is spearheading this effort, Datar says, with most of the traditional food industry stuck in “a deeply ingrained system that makes it less amenable to change.”

Brooklyn-based startup Modern Meadow is developing an edible cultured meat prototype along with bioengineered leather products, which do not require animal slaughter.

Environmental challenge

Among the prominent investors in this sector is Microsoft founder Bill Gates, who sees the industry as helping fight against a key environmental challenge.

“How can we make enough meat without destroying the planet?” Gates said on his blog.

He added that he is “hopeful

The people who are doing these things are evidently not foodies. They eat to live, but do not live to eat.

about the future of meat substitutes.”

“I have invested in some companies working on this and am impressed with the results so far,” he said.

Gates is among the backers of Hampton Creek Foods, a San Francisco startup which makes plant-based egg substitutes for its mayonnaise and cookie dough, and Impossible Foods, which produces vegetable-based meat and cheese substitutes.

While meat substitutes have been around for years, today’s startups are aiming to use technology and innovation that have worked in Silicon Valley.

California-based Beyond Meat, which uses soy and pea protein for its products including “Swedish meatballs” and “Southwest chicken strips,” says this type of food offers a more sustainable model.

“Our core mission is to seek mass market solutions to replace animal protein with plant protein,” said Beyond Meat co-founder Brent Taylor, who claims the product creates the “fiber-like structures and texture or meat.”

Taylor told AFP new ideas are needed because “the rate of meat consumption in markets like China is rising at such a rapid clip that we can’t keep up.”

Beyond Meat backers include Obvious Ventures, an investment group including Twitter co-founders Evan Williams and Biz Stone and the prominent California tech equity firm Kleiner Perkins Caufield & Byers.

Other startups in the sector include Daiya Foods (vegan cheese), Exo (cricket flour protein bars) and Soylent (powdered meal replacements.)

Chris Dixon at the investment firm Andreessen Horowitz was bullish on Soylent in a blog post earlier this year explaining the firm’s $20 million investment.

“We have all sorts of food-related problems in the world — malnutrition, diabetes, and obesity, to name a few,” Dixon said in a blog post.

“Part of the solution to these problems is providing people with better scientific research, and more food choices that are convenient, nutritious, and affordable.”

Lloyd unleashed on Japan

WOMEN'S WORLD CUP

Captain scores hat trick to seal American championship

Mere moments after the 2015 FIFA Women's World Cup final got underway, it was already over.

The anticipation of what had been shaping up to be a great championship contest between Japan and the U.S. — a rematch of the final four years ago — was quickly replaced with shock. The Americans started the match on the front foot. They were soon running downhill before anyone, including the Japanese, really knew what was happening.

They wouldn't be stopped. The U.S. took the FIFA Women's World Cup with a 5-2 win over Japan before 53,341 fans on Sunday at BC Place Stadium.

Three minutes in, the U.S. struck on a goal from Carli Lloyd.

On a corner kick, Lloyd snuck into the middle of the box and placed the ball out of the reach of goalkeeper Ayumi Kaihori. It was red, white and blue insanity.

Fans from different parts of the U.S. travelled to Vancouver for the tournament and this match.

They loved what they were seeing.

One goal suddenly turned into four for the Americans.

They built a four-goal lead before the match was even 17 minutes old. Lloyd had the hat trick. Victory looked safe and secure, with the U.S. in complete control and Japan in complete disarray.

Lloyd's third goal was the perfect example of just how far off the rails things had come for the Japanese. She caught Kaihori well out of her goal and beat the Japanese keeper with a shot from midfield.

Prior to Sunday's final, the U.S. and goalkeeper Hope Solo had gone through the tournament without having allowed a goal since their first game in the group stage. That was on June 8.

Down by four and needing something positive, Japan managed to get on the board.

Yuki Ogimi scored on a shot that beat a diving Solo, cutting the U.S. lead to three.

Japan narrowed the deficit to two goals. U.S. defender Julie Johnston inadvertently headed the ball into her own net in the 52nd minute.

But only two minutes later, the U.S. restored its three-goal lead on a goal from Tobin Heath to put the finishing touches on the third World Cup victory for the Americans.

IN BRIEF

Blue Jays' Donaldson rules all-star game ballot

Josh Donaldson is headed to MLB's all-star game.

The Toronto Blue Jays third baseman will be starting for the American League on July 14 in Cincinnati, the league announced on Sunday. Donaldson set a new all-time single season all-star voting record with 14,090,188 total votes. He surpasses the previous record set by Josh Hamilton in 2012.

"I feel honoured to represent the AL All Star team!! Thank you to all the fans who voted!" said Donaldson from his verified Twitter account, adding the hashtags #blessed #teammatesarestuds #truenorth.

In 83 games, he has a .296 batting average, with 19 home runs and 56 RBIs.

Shaman Ghost wins Plate

Shaman Ghost took the lead down the stretch to capture the 156th running of the $1-million Queen's Plate on Sunday in Toronto.

Shaman Ghost finished ahead of Danish Dynaformer in a battle of the 3-1 co-favourites. The second-place finish was bitter-sweet for trainer Roger Attfield, who was looking for a record ninth Plate victory. Shaman Ghost won the 1-1/4-mile race in an unofficial time of 2:03.45 at Woodbine Racetrack.

CFL

Harris steers Argos to double-OT win

The legend of Trevor Harris continues to grow.

The Argonauts quarterback led his team on a last-minute touchdown drive to send the game into overtime and then threw two touchdown passes in extra time to lead Toronto to a 42-40 double-overtime victory over the host Saskatchewan Roughriders on Sunday. Harris, in his third game as starter for the injured Ricky Ray, led Toronto (2-0) to a 26-11 upset over the Edmonton Eskimos in Week 1.

"I just want to be the best possible backup I can be," said Harris, who went 30-for-38 with 267 yards and four touchdowns and one interception in the game. "Ricky Ray is one of the best quarterbacks ever in the CFL. My job is to steer the ship in the right direction when he's not available."

Saskatchewan led the game

28-21 with just over a minute left in the game. Harris led the Argonauts on a last-minute drive, capped off with a 16-yard touchdown pass to Chad Owens.

In a crazy overtime session filled with penalties and a few reviewed plays, Saskatchewan opened up the scoring on its first possession when Rob Bagg took the ball one yard into the end zone on an end-around. Running back Jerome Messam was tackled in the backfield on the ensuing two-point conversion. The Argos stormed back with a nine-yard receiving touchdown by running back Brandon Whitaker. They, too, failed their two-point conversion.

In the second overtime, Harris threw an 11-yard touchdown pass to Tori Gurley and then hooked up with running back Anthony Coombs on a three-yard strike for the two-point conversion to put Toronto up 42-34. Saskatchewan (0-2) had a chance to tie the game after QB Kevin Glenn connected with Chris Getzlaf for a 25-yard touchdown on the next drive, but Glenn just missed Getzlaf on the two-point convert attempt.

★ IT'S ALL IN THE STARS by Sally Brompton

Aries March 21 - April 20
Someone in a position of authority will ask you to do something for them and you will say yes. But don't sell yourself cheap. A job done well is a job worth getting paid the going rate for.

Taurus April 21 - May 21
This is the ideal time to throw out all the emotional junk you have acquired during the first half of the year. Today's Sun-Pluto link will encourage you to be ruthless with yourself.

Gemini May 22 - June 21
This is going to be a busy week and the less you try to do the more work will land in your lap. At some stage, for the sake of your health, you will have to call a halt. Not even a livewire Gemini can do it all.

Cancer June 22 - July 23
You may be tempted to give up on something that is proving more difficult than you expected but you must stick with it a while longer. Keep plugging away a few more days.

Leo July 24 - Aug. 23
Don't take it to heart if someone seems to be avoiding you. The fact is you have been giving off some rather heavy vibrations of late and they find you a bit scary. Take it as a hint that you need to be a lot more laidback.

Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
What changes over the next few days has been in the pipeline for quite some time and chances are you will welcome it. Yes, it may be disruptive but on this occasion disruption is better than the status quo. Move with the times.

Libra Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
There is an urgency about you at the moment, no doubt due to the influence of Pluto. You know if you pass up an opportunity to better yourself it will be a very long time, if ever, before it comes round again.

Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Sudden changes may not be entirely welcome but neither are they to be feared, so accept and work with them. Nothing lasts forever, so go with the flow and enjoy where fate takes you.

Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Something dramatic is likely to happen over the next 24 hours. However, if you keep your wits about you and react quickly while everyone else is dithering you could make some serious money.

Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
The more you try to force events to move in one direction today the more likely it is they will move in the opposite direction. Look on the bright side: the less you resist the more you will achieve.

Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
No matter how persuasive and no matter how logical your arguments may be, almost certainly friends and colleagues will oppose what you want to do today. But you should do it anyway.

Pisces Feb. 20 - March 20
What takes place today may not be to your liking but later in the month you will be glad you were forced to make certain changes. You must slow down for a while.
